EditCNC.3.0.2.9a.[Cracked]Mitsubishi Outlander PHEV Review The Mitsubishi Outlander PHEV, on the other hand, gets a refreshed exterior and interior, while the engine's power output has been bumped up to 154 horsepower. More than a year after it was first introduced, the Mitsubishi Outlander PHEV has been revised for 2019. The refreshed model is based on the smaller Outlander Sport hatchback and adds a plug-in hybrid version. Mitsubishi says the Outlander PHEV will have a 26-kW battery pack to power a plug-in hybrid powertrain, along with a 154-hp electric motor. This hybrid system gives the Outlander PHEV a total system output of 195 hp. Like the outgoing model, the Outlander PHEV is available in three trims: the PHEV, the PHEV Premium, and the Outlander PHEV Premium. The PHEV and PHEV Premium versions get the same base engine as their non-plug-in hybrid counterparts, while the PHEV Premium adds Apple CarPlay and Android Auto capability. Buttons on the center console are tuned to bring the Outlander PHEV into the 21st century, with a revised instrument panel, an updated audio system with more speakers, and the option of a display similar to that found in the Outlander Sport. Exterior The Mitsubishi Outlander PHEV has had only modest updates for 2019. The new grille is slightly larger than before, and the revamped headlights are unique to the Outlander PHEV. New LED tail lights give the model a sharper look, and new 18-inch wheels add to the already sporty image. The back of the Outlander PHEV adds even more sportiness to the model. A spoiler and diffuser may give the Outlander PHEV a little more oomph, but that's about all the interior of the plug-in hybrid model has been revised for 2019. Interior The Mitsubishi Outlander PHEV also gains some improvements in the cabin. Air conditioning is now optional, and the gear selector button 2d92ce491b
