But when I use absolute path it works. I also tried to use a variable to store the absolute path but it didn't work either. Here is my code: var cssFilePath = "../static/css/"; $(".content").append(""); When I use the absolute path in this javascript my page gets refreshed every time. Also when I used a variable to store the absolute path it didn't work either. A: When you use the absolute path, you are actually giving the full address to the CSS file (By accessing a relative path, you will actually find yourself at the local path. If you want to use a relative path and access a external file (and then it's back to the server), try the following: $(".content").append(""); But of course, this is not portable and will not work in all circumstances. Q: How to handle an out of memory exception when loading a bitmap I have this code to load an image in a bitmap: ... Bitmap bmp = BitmapFactory.DecodeFile("image.jpg"); ... Then later on, I have this to save it: ... try { FileOutputStream fos = new FileOutputStream(file);
