Evans, 39, went to the woods on his property where he was expected to see some deer. For the past two winters, Evans' grandfather, Herbert "Bo" Evans, and their dog had chased bear out of the area. Bo had shot the animal. The tips of Bo's ears will be turned in to authorities. Bo told police he shot the bear between midnight and 6:30 a.m., when the bear started clawing at the cabin where the family was spending the night. But it was too late for Marc Evans. "The only reason we do this is to have some fun, and if it interferes with someone else having some fun it's not worth it," Bo Evans said. "You've got to be able to live with the mistake you make." The state Department of Natural Resources received a report on the bear at 11:30 a.m. Thursday. The bear was killed, but its body wasn't found until 6:30 p.m. "It's a protected species," Bo said. "I don't understand why we need a permit to shoot them. If they go out of their range, they get killed." Authorities said the bear lived in the woods about three miles from Bo Evans' cabin. The family believes the bear was a yearling cub, about six months old, that went off to find its own den. Bo Evans said the bear spent much of the time in his yard, wandering through the corn and grass. It was not a friendly bear.

Q: MonoTouch - Failed to initialize 'MonoTouch.TextKit' - no assembly found I'm trying to use the Xamarin.iOS version of the TextKit nuget package. The installation worked fine on MonoTouch 5.0.3 (can verify with a brand new 5.0.3 project), but fails on MonoTouch 6.2.0 (which I'm using since a couple projects require it). Here's the error I'm getting (exactly the same error regardless of the project I use): 'MonoTouch.TextKit' is an interface-only assembly. You must add a reference to assembly 'MonoTouch.Foundation' prior to assembly 'MonoTouch.TextKit'. What am I missing here? A: I would have figured this out sooner, but I followed the debugger to the line that was throwing the error, and the reference was actually missing from my project. The reference is there, but isn't added to the project. I had to open the solution, find the reference in the project, right click, properties, references, add reference, and select Microsoft.iOS.TextKit. Note that the "Missing Assembly" column on the properties page lists an error: "This reference was built from the native 'MonoTouch.TextKit.dll' assembly, and cannot be built by the managed MonoTouch.TextKit assembly."
